By express.co.uk, February 28, 2025

A new app called EarthCam allows users to see views from the top of the Statue of Liberty, including the torch, which has been closed to the public since 1916.

The statue was originally opened to visitors at the torch, but access was restricted after a major explosion caused damage.

Now, people can enjoy live streams of the statue and its surroundings from home, sparking interest and nostalgia for the views once available to the public.
